

Gender

Research: When Gender Diversity Makes Firms More Productive

by Stephen Turban, Dan Wu, and Letian (LT) Zhang

February 11, 2019

EschCollection/Getty Images

Summary. Does diversity make a company more productive? Many say yes — some researchers argue that gender diversity leads to more innovative thinking and signals to investors that a company is competently run. Others say no — conflicting research indicates that gender... more

The business world has long debated the effect of gender diversity on business outcomes. Does diversity make a company more productive?

Do you want to keep reading HBR?

Sign in or create a free HBR.org account to read more articles.

Passwords must have at least 10 characters, one number, one lower and one upper case letter, and one special character

- ☐ Sign up to receive occasional emails from HBR. You may unsubscribe at any time.

View our privacy policy >

I'm not a robot

reCAPTCHA
Privacy - Terms

Create Account

Get unlimited articles and more. Subscribe Now

Need help getting access? Contact Customer Service:

800.988.0886 (U.S./Canada) 617.783.7500 (International) customerservice@harvardbusiness.org